y switch - option

The proximity light switch reacts to motion near a sensor integrated into the mirror casing. A hand movement in front of the sensor turns on the illumination. Another movement turns it off.

touch switch - option

An additional light switch reacts to finger touch on a sensor integrated into the mirror casing or surface. Touching the sensor turns on the illumination. Another touch turns it off.

touch switch with light intensity adjustment - option

An additional light switch reacts to finger touch on a sensor integrated into the mirror casing or surface. A short touch turns on illumination at full brightness. Another short touch turns it off. Touching the sensor and keeping the finger on it turns on the illumination at full brightness and then gradually reduces the brightness of the lights until they are off. Taking the finger off the sensor while dimming the lights interrupts the brightness reduction. When the lamps are on, touching the sensor and keeping the finger on it results in a gradual increase in the brightness until reaching full light intensity. Taking the finger off the sensor while making the lights brighter interrupts the brightness increase.
